

Strategic Risk Management – The New Core Competency Executive Seminar
 Kellstadt Graduate School of Business, DePaul University

Friday, December 3, 2010

9:00am – 12:00 (noon) DePaul Center 1 East Jackson Blvd. - Chicago, IL

The Center for Strategy, Execution, and Valuation at DePaul University is pleased to announce a morning executive forum on Friday, December 3, 2010 on Strategic Risk Management: The New Core Competency. Strategic Risk Management is a necessary foundation and component of Enterprise Risk Management (ERM) and a needed core competency of directors and management teams. This executive forum will present Strategic Risk Management leading practices that can be adapted by your organization. The forum will include applications and case studies of a Strategic Risk Assessment process and tools to develop your organization's ERM processes and capabilities. Management teams and board members involved in ERM and related governance and control functions and those advising boards and management in strategic risk management can benefit from this seminar. A new book Strategic Risk Management: A Primer for Directors and Management Teams will be available at the workshop.

What is the Executive Forum's Content?

The agenda of our December 3rd executive forum will begin with a networking breakfast, followed by presentations by Dr. Mark L. Frigo, Director of the Center for Strategy, Execution, and Valuation, on leading practices and presentation of case study applications of a Strategic Risk Assessment process and tools. The executive forum will include a panel discussion by leading risk management executives who will share practical insights for connecting strategy and risk management.
